What is TPS? The TPS (Temporary Protected Status) Program is a life-saving immigration program that allows foreign nationals to remain in the U.S. and work legally if, while they were in the U.S., something catastrophic happened in their country of origin that prevented their safe return. TPS protects approximately 450,000 people from 10 countries who would otherwise be subjected to disease, violence, starvation, the aftermath of natural disasters, and other life-threatening conditions. Visit http://www.nationaltpsalliance.org for more information.

Workshop on Anti-Semitism

The Children of TPS Perform!

Join the Harvard Ed Portal, Comité TPS, and Boston Experimental Theatre for a performance of The Last Dream: Stories Created and Performed by the Children of TPS. The play features the children of parents with Temporary Protected Status, a federal immigration status in danger of being canceled. The production is a dramatic representation of the struggles and joys of children of immigrants, including members of the Harvard community, and the pain of threat to one's way of life.

DATE: Friday, 12/14/2018

TIME: 7pm

LOCATION: Harvard Ed Portal, 224 Western Avenue, Allston, MA 02134

Show Up for BC Grad Employees!

Boston College has chosen to discipline graduate workers for exercising their free speech and workers rights. Support the Boston College Graduate Employees Union as they deliver a petition to the BC President, signed by a majority of their members, to get BC to come to the bargaining table. Mark your calendars for Friday, December 7th at 10:30am, but look out for an email confirming the date, time, and exact location.

Sign the petition here: Boston College: Stop Punishing Grad Workers and Bargain Now!
